COURSE OF STUDY

Students in the Pre-Law and the Arts program will take academically challenging courses designed to help them develop the skills necessary to succeed in post-secondary legal studies and a wide variety of professions. Students will be introduced to courses normally taught in the first year of law school, including those exposing them to legal procedures and professionalism. Students will also participate in performance-based courses such as trial advocacy, speech, and debate. In addition to this program of study, students will take college preparatory courses across the curriculum.

FACULTY

The Pre-Law and the Arts faculty is comprised of Pennsylvania certified teachers and legal professionals with years of experience in education as well as in the law and justice systems. The director of the department, Mrs. Mia Frank, is a veteran English teacher at Lincoln Park who is also a Pennsylvania licensed attorney with several years of experience in practicing law.

COMPETITION

Students in the Pre-Law and the Arts Department are provided the opportunity and expected to participate in mock trial tournaments and speech and debate competitions during their time in the program.

FIELD TRIPS & EXPERIENCES

Students in the Pre-Law and the Arts Department get real-world exposure to the legal community. Master classes with legal professionals provide students with first-hand knowledge about the profession, and students will have the opportunity to visit area courthouses to witness the law and justice system in action.
