

ENROLLMENT

Prospective students should review all enrollment documents and videos before their scheduled evaluation. Lincoln Park holds several enrollment seminars a year, usually January through March. The seminar consists of a tour, admissions video and a meeting with the arts department directors. The admissions video, an overview video from each director and evaluation requirement are all also on our website.

EVALUATION GUIDELINES

Students interested in applying for the Literary Arts Department should prepare a portfolio of their best written work from one or more genres. Prospective students will then meet with Literary Arts staff for an evaluation interview. For the complete evaluation guidelines, visit our website, www.lppacs.org.

COURSE OF STUDY

All Literary Arts students begin by taking introductory classes in each of the major genres (poetry, fiction, creative nonfiction, and drama/screenwriting), which prepare students for writing workshops - the core of the Literary Arts curriculum. In addition to core writing classes, the Lincoln Park's Literary Arts Department also offers instruction in a variety of special topic areas, to create well-rounded writers and students. These courses are offered on a rotating basis.

FACULTY

Students in Literary Arts are taught by working authors and writers, with instruction supplemented by such acclaimed guest artists as Lee Gutkind (the "godfather" of creative non fiction); the late Jeffrey Zaslow (bestselling author of The Last Lecture); National Public Radio writer/producer Starlee Kine; Neil McCormick (author of Killing Bono); FOUND magazine founder Davy Rothbart; Wordplay founder Alan Olifson; and authors Jane McCarty and Sherrie Flick.

Partnerships and Guest Artists:

Classes in the Literary Arts Department range from journalism to bookbinding to philosophy. The core of the curriculum, modeled on the example of Carnegie Mellon University, is found in writing workshops, which allow young writers the chance to critique their peers' work, and to have their own work critiqued. Several past and current faculty members from CMU's Creative Writing department have visited Lincoln Park to offer guest instruction, including National Book Award-winning poet Terrance Hayes, poet (and Marvel Comics writer) Yona Harvey, and poet/screenwriter Jim Daniels.

PUBLISHING

---

The Literary Arts Department offers students the opportunity to participate in three unique publishing ventures. The school's award-winning literary journal, pulp, and its newspaper, The Siren, are collaborations with Lincoln Park's Media Arts Department. Meanwhile, BatCat Press, the only high school student-run press in the nation, publishes new works by regional and national authors. These books are chosen, edited, designed and handmade by staff members. All three of these publishing opportunities give students the chance to explore the publishing industry from the inside, and gain valuable professional experience.
